Foreword

Mastery is a product of consistently going beyond our limits. It's remarkable how much mediocrity we get by with, surrounding ourselves with daily reminders that the average is acceptable. Our world suffers from terminal normality.

In order for us to have massive transformation in our wealth, happiness and work, for things to change first I must change. What part of the "I" must we change?

First, we have to change our perception of money and the world. We have to see ourselves living in an ocean of abundance. There is no scarcity in this world and everyone can be wealthy and happy.

Second, we must be willing to eliminate certain distractions that are clearly preventing us from reaching our desired destination. What are the inconsequential events that are filling my schedule today that should be removed?

Third, it is taking action and acquiring a millionaire mindset. Your only Failure is your failure to participate. Be involved, take control of your life today and start seeing the new you that you never knew possible.

Here are the seven Mind Hacks to start exploring the Invisible Oasis within you in 7 days.

Mind Hack 1: Assess Yourself Everyday

The most direct way to live rich is to cultivate an elevated degree of self-awareness. This includes becoming cognizant of your strong points, failings, desires, gifts, knowledge, prejudices, attachments, wants, emotions, instincts, habits, and frame of mind.

Have an Honest Look

The beginning step on your path of change has to be to acknowledge that how your life is today isn't how you wish it to be. It's all right to want something and have no clue on how to acquire it, but it's not all right to lie to yourself and make believe everything is perfect when you recognize it isn't.

When your awareness is low, your choices will produce substandard results. When you do things that are not genuine or a reflection of the real you, you will not be happy with yourself and will end up confused.

It is important to do the following exercise and put down your answers in a personal journal so that you can reflect and ponder about them yourself. Take about 15 minutes. You will start to unlock and realize certain habits that have been impeding you from the successful life that you could have.

The following are five areas for you to get started.

Five Areas

(1) Reality

Am I honest with myself and other people, or do I feel obligated to lie about anything?

What do I anticipate will occur if I carry on my present course?

(2) Capacity

Are my anticipations fair and precise, or am I overly optimistic or pessimistic?

Do I totally accept the reality of my position, or am I living in denial?

What can I accomplish today to become more realistic?

(3) Might

Do I accept total responsibility for everything in my life history?

What do I truly wish, and what am I willing to accomplish to get it?

What unimportant actions am I willing to forgo to achieve my goals?

(4) Command

Do I take charge of my life, or do I blindly follow other people?

Are my activities effective, acquiring the results I wish?

Do I endure in the face of obstacles and reversals, or do I quit too easily?

(5) Intelligence

Am I positive that I'll accomplish the goals I determined for myself?

How may I spend my time on what's really significant and avoid wasting time on technicalities?

How well am I able to explain my core disciplines for layman people to understand?

These questions will help you measure how close you're getting to a principle-centered life. Don't be disheartened if a lot of your answers look negative. When it comes to being truthful about something that's in our experience might bring shame or isolation, we quickly become uncomfortable and irritated.

However, being truthful and telling the truth as much as possible, regardless the irritation or how it makes you temporarily feel, will begin transforming your life quickly.

You're responsible for how your life turns out. Learn to accept where you are today, and consider the steps you are able to take to better your alignment to the success you want.

Mind Hack 2: Adapt Good Habits for a Fresh Start

Many of us have recurring patterns – the same old habits keeps cropping up. It is not always easy to overcome resistance and change our old habits immediately, but it is very possible. In order to adapt new habits, we have to center on our desired outcome and maintain a serious effort.

Make Small Changes Everyday

Recall that you're responsible for how your life turns out. Whether your habits make you or break you, you're the one who has to deal with the long-run consequences. As habits exert power over your outcomes, you have to exert might over your habits.

Don't wait for great habits to establish themselves or for bad habits to give up on their own. You have to take the opening move and produce the changes you want. Cultivate actions that keep you on the heart-centered course. Some good ones:

- 1) Adjust targets daily in advance. Choose what you'll accomplish; then accomplish it. Without a clear-cut focus, it's too easy to buckle under to distractions.
- 2) Discover your peak cycles of productiveness, and schedule your most crucial jobs for those times.
- 3) Provide yourself frequent rewards for accomplishment. See a film, schedule a massage, or spend a day at a funfair.

Consciously train the most reliable habits you are able to. For each habit you think about, ask yourself: Is this truly what I want? Is this uniform with the individual I most wish to be? If any part of your life seems fake and inauthentic to you, it has to be substituted with a more genuine choice.

This won't be simple, but it is right.

Your elemental goal in this area is to produce a set of mutually supportive habits that synergistically step-up your alignment with reality, affection, and might. Great habits enable you to stay in a positive flux state while you center on originative expression. You will consciously arrive at the high-level conclusions, and your habits take care of the low-level particulars.

Once your habits work together so congruently, the outcome is both amazing and refined. You might never reach this ideal within your lifespan, but each step you take in that direction is worthwhile.

But Wait, do you know What's even better?

What if I can give you all these habits without any work? Not sure what I mean? Just watch this video and you will start to understand...

Mind Hack 3: Master the 6 Laws of Influence

Influencing others isn't luck or magic – it's science. There are proven ways to help make you more successful as an individual and as an entrepreneur.

Laws of Influence

In today's age and society, we often have to count on others for help. What if there is actually a SCIENTIFIC way to increase your chance that others will help you in time of need?

Here are the 6 Laws of Influence:

Law 1) Reciprocation

Law 2) Social Proof

Law 3) Commitment and Consistency

Law 4) Liking

Law 5) Authority

Law 6) Scarcity

Reciprocation

People are wired towards reciprocity. If you give someone a favor, they tend to feel indebted to you. They would want to pay you back somehow or another. So, if you mow your neighbor's lawn while he's on vacation, he might watch your pets while you're visiting family at Christmas.

It works on both a minute level or a large scale. A very classic example was the 1985 earthquake in Mexico. Ethiopia, themselves were dealing with crushing famine and internal strife but still gave generously to aid Mexico's recovery process despite being in major debt. Why? Well, if you track back to 1935, about 50 years before, you'll discover that Mexico loyally helped to defend Ethiopia when Italy came trouncing into their territory.

Social Proof

People do what others do to feel belonged. You've probably given into this kind of influence. You see a group of people looking up into the sky. What are you going to do? You are most likely going to look up into the sky to see what they are looking at. As such, next time if need someone to do something, if everyone else is open to help you in the task, he/she would too.

Commitment & Consistency

Everyone has a self-image — a way of thinking of themselves. When people are presented with an idea or an appeal that fits their self-image, they are very likely to say “Yes”. This phenomenon is called consistency.

In a similar truth, people who make commitments tend to follow through with their past commitments. They have decided, through consistency, that a certain action coincide with who they believe themselves to be. Thus, they make commitments — small but definitive actions — that advance this ideal. As such, before you present your actual idea, it is good to collect small commitments and actions that complements your idea beforehand.

Liking

People most likely buy from people they like. If you would like to train children to be salespeople, they can start trying to sell to friends and family. Why? Because they have established relationships with them. The friends and family love them, and they will probably make a purchase. Kid salesperson feels happy and motivated, and goes off and sell to other people.

Likability is a huge form of influence. Successful businessman and salespeople are those who present themselves as likeable. They smile. They say nice things. Likeability is formed when they know they are liked or you like what they love. Through this, they establish likeability to get the order of the sale.

Authority

The vast majority of people around the world prefer to follow instead of making decisions. They would be more inclined to heed advise of authority figures who have credentials in their field, have an important message as well as a platform from which to speak. Bring out the weaknesses of your ideas first and later on supplementing it the benefits that supersedes the cost would also add credibility to what you are saying.

Whether it is good or bad for humanity, authority figures will always wield enormous influence in daily decision making. They can tell people to kill others or to sacrifice their life. It has happened before. They can instruct people to donate to charity or clean up the city lanes. Influence by authority is an incredible potent source of power.

Scarcity

If people have the impression that something is going to run out, they will often rush to buy it so as not to miss out. The “Limited Time Only” sales and “While Supplies Last” phrases are actually business uses of this method of persuasion.

Practicing the 6 laws of persuasion on a consistent basis and you will start seeing MASSIVE changes in both your job and personal life.

But wait just a moment...

If you need any help to speed up your level of mastery 2x, 3x and even 5x faster? You definitely should check this out!

Mind Hack 4: Unlocking Your 3rd Chakra Eye

Don't aim at success — the more you aim at it and make it a target, the more you are going to miss it. Success is similar to happiness. It cannot be pursued; it must ensue and it comes as a by-product and an unintended side effect to one's dedication or surrender to a cause/person greater than oneself.

Focus on Growing Others

Most people want success for themselves instead of others. They want to be in the glamor, win all the awards and earn millions of dollars. Having all of this is good, but first you must select a cause that is greater than yourself. This will attract more success, instead of repelling it.

A great leader focuses on growing others, and this in turn will help them grow themselves. The universe works in magical ways. As a hobby, I exercise often by jogging and lifting weights. I find that when I help others exercise, I become stronger and faster than I would if I did it all myself. Helping others takes the same amount of time as it does to help yourself. Those who want to be rich must enrich others first.

After researching CEOs in the top fortune 500 companies, I became more convinced that genuine happiness and true success does not come from finding yourself, but in losing yourself: “Losing yourself to a team you believe in, a cause that you are motivated to fight for, and a commitment to find a solution to a problem that has not been solved.”

The most successful entrepreneurs don't look inside and then plan a life. They look beyond and find a problem that summons their life. The more we are able to look beyond ourselves, the greater we are able to expand our mental capacities. Most successful leaders, individuals and teams spend time on things larger than themselves, their determination to struggle, and the legacy that they hope to leave. How well you answer this question can be helpful in evaluating on whether you are either more “me” or “we” focused:

What is the first single thing you hope to bring into existence around you (problem or possibility), which has not materialized? What are you willing to sacrifice to bring it to life?

Not sure? Checkout this out now! The truth will be revealed...

Mind Hack 5: Seeing Every Challenge as an Opportunity

Occasionally what initially surfaces in your reality is a stepping-stone that will take you to your destination instead of the goal itself. It might not appear like what you were looking for or expecting but can be just what is required to bridge the gap to your ambitions and take you to where you would like to be.

A Way to Get There

A stepping-stone perhaps may be a person, challenge, insight or learning. It might possibly be outcomes that will help you fortify your character or purpose. It might be a chance for love, pleasure or happiness that will step-up our emotional vibration in a sense that's essential for you to draw in what you want.

It might even be a crisis of sorts from which you'll learn and develop. What might appear like a crisis at the time, a loss of employment or relationship for instance, might indeed bring gifts that ultimately serve the destiny, success and the triumph you want and have elected. These opportunities might not be clear at the moment but further down the line will become more evident as you retrospect and survey the situation with hindsight.

Take our wealth for example. When do we start looking for jobs? When we cannot afford to pay our bills! In relationships, when do we usually tell each other how much we care? When the marriage is falling apart! That's when we say to ourselves: "I'm sick of being broke. I'm tired of losing my loved ones. I'm going to do something." We begin to see it as an opportunity to change and improve ourselves.

Have faith in the larger blossoming picture. The universe recognizes the most formal and honoring path to your dreams. Every hardship, every failure, every grief bears with it the seed of a like or larger benefit. It will organize all components of your life towards the symphony of your success if you're open and permit it.

Making yourself available for chances might mean stepping away from your current comfort zone. I have discovered that unless something feels off, it has always served as a chance. Occasionally that opportunity did not display itself until weeks, months or even years later. There can be a gift in every condition you undergo.

Every chance can lead to a countless number of other opportunities and be a wellspring of additional resources.

But Want me to do the heavy lifting for you? Can't seem to find good opportunities? Let me give 1 to you right now!

Mind Hack 6: Align Yourself with the Experts

Every multimillionaire has a team of key experts that gives them strategic updated advice. Who you associate with determines who you are. A blind man cannot lead a blind man to success.

Invest in Your Own Growth

Everyone has an opinion. You only want to listen to the ones worth listening to and the best. I see so many people often fail because they start listening to the wrong people, which later leads them to distressing results. You don't require anybody's permission to choose which associations are most beneficial for you.

Hiring a business mentor is one of the best ways for you to move into the next level of life. A friend could say, “You should do more sit-ups to get stronger”, but a coach will present you how and what it takes to make you strong, which compels you to action. Find an established name that can identify with your needs. Most business coaches charge anything from 10% to 20% of your yearly income, which usually pays off if you follow their advice. To add on to that, the knowledge you receive adds to your asset and belongs to you forever.

In regards to business, a lot of people fall into the trap where their business becomes a one-man/woman show. They start to get some momentum and results that they had to boot strap together by starting off on their own. Instead of off-loading tasks, they expand their day-to-day activities and take up the troubles themselves.

The best thing to do is to first is identify the weak points and align your mindset with experts in those fields. It is worthwhile to get a mentor. It could be slightly more expensive than doing it by yourself, but it actually saves money in the long run from the mistakes that you could have saved and the meaningless effort wasted.

A good mentor breaks you out of your comfort zone and pushes you into new experiences to bring your business to new heights.

Mind Hack 7: Create Systems that Leverage

So you want to work less but still make more money than others. To make more with less, that is the entrepreneurial dream. The saying goes “success doesn’t come without a little work.” And that’s true. But once you reach the success plateau, then what? Create leverage.

Do More with Less

Multimillionaires cannot do it all alone. They do not have the time to do so anyway. They have processes and systems that propel them to leverage their time and abilities. There's always a better and faster way to get things done. If you create a system of success for yourself, it will eventually serve you. However, it must be your system, not someone else's. What may work for others may not work for you.

Every day, I have certain habits, devices, and systems that I use to help me operate more efficiently. In today's day and age, our smart devices have wonderful financial tracking and management applications for us to make life easy. I used to think I have to wake up early or attune myself to less sleep to be successful but I realized that my peak time of productivity is from 10 p.m. to 4 a.m. I go to sleep ridiculously late and have found many benefits in doing so. The 5 a.m. wake-up club doesn't work for everyone. You must find a system that works for you.

Here are other leverage systems that I used myself that have proven useful:

Have a personal virtual assistant

With the number of virtual assistants growing, their expertise now runs the gamut, making it easier to find someone who fits your organization or your daily task. If reading emails is taking your precious time away from productivity, don't do it. Nowadays, with so many outsourcing platforms, laborious work can be done with just five dollars.

Here is a non-exhaustive list of websites to find others to do the work for you:

- Upwork.com
- Gurus.com
- Fiverr.com
- Iwriter.com

Eisenhower Box

To choose which jobs to delegate away from ourselves, we can use the “Eisenhower Box” to remove and eliminate time wasting activities. Eisenhower was the 34th President of the United States, serving two terms from 1953 to 1961.

His most famous productivity method is known as the Eisenhower Box and it’s a simple decision-making tool that you can use right away. Let’s talk about how to become more productive using the Eisenhower strategy.

Using the decision matrix below, you will categorize your actions based on four possibilities:

1. Urgent and important (tasks you will do immediately).
2. Important, but not urgent (tasks you will schedule to do later).
3. Urgent, but not important (tasks you will delegate to someone else).
4. Neither urgent nor important (tasks that you will eliminate).

The great thing about this matrix is that it can be used for broad productivity plans (“How should I spend my time each week?”) and for smaller, daily plans (“What should I do today?”).

THE EISENHOWER BOX

| | URGENT | NOT URGENT |
|---------------|---|---|
| IMPORTANT | DO Do it now. Write article for today. | DECIDE Schedule a time to do it. Exercising. Calling family and friends. Researching articles. Long-term biz strategy. |
| NOT IMPORTANT | DELEGATE Who can do it for you? Scheduling interviews. Booking flights. Approving comments. Answering certain emails. Sharing articles. | DELETE Eliminate it. Watching television. Checking social media. Sorting through junk mail. |

*"What is important is seldom urgent and what is urgent is seldom important."
 -Dwight Eisenhower, 34th President of the United States*

Work on a calendar basis

All rich and successful people work on a calendar basis. This is to schedule important events first before irrelevant and unproductive programs distract us from our goal. This helps you to gain clarity of the important events in life. Missing a friend's birthday may not change anything but missing a major technology convention certainly would!

Parkinson's law mentions "work expands so as to fill the time available for its completion". Working on a calendar basis set mini guidelines through your week and ensures that productivity is of the highest level. Our time is precious so don't let it go to waste.

If one has a lever large enough, one can move the world.

By the way... To create systems easily, you can check out this useful tool...

Conclusion

Practicing these seven Mind Hacks everyday will definitely change your life in a massive way. As much as information is valuable, it is meaningless without clear defined actions. Picking up this book is your first step to changing your life for the better. The next step is practice, practice and MORE practice.

We all have the power and capabilities to be successful. Unfortunately, in today's society, we are born to win but programmed to fail. What it takes to achieve our fullest potential is seldom taught in schools or work. As much as it takes much effort and pressure for carbon to change into diamond, don't expect instant success overnight.

Circumstances in life are constantly shifting and it is important for us to adapt and be prepared. We tend to undermine the importance of knowing ourselves. Many of us go through each day reacting from event to event. We often live life getting by instead of making conscious choices of who we are and what we want. We are taught to make a living instead of design our lives.

My last message to you is this: The most important person we should invest in is ourselves. Take every opportunity to constantly improve our mental and financial capabilities. This is what I learnt which made me to who I am today. Many people fear to take a leap of faith and are forever living in their comfort zones. Financial freedom is not a fate but a choice. We often look at the initial small investments while forgetting the life changing experiences and insights we can receive from growing ourselves.

Follow your dreams and keep the faith. As an ancient Chinese proverb suggests: A thousand-mile journey begins with a single step. Don't be afraid to take massive action. Don't shrink your goals to fit your paycheck but rather learn to expand your income. I have left you proven tested ways that allowed me to make multiple streams of income in the Bonus Resources Section below.

Believe in yourself, keep on practicing and I will see you at the top!
